It turns out we need to clarify that “no shoes, no shirt, no service” doesn’t only apply to customers. In the case of one Houston man, it’s also important guidance for his DoorDash driver. A quiet night at home took a turn for Kianté Matlock when his Dasher delivered a little more than he’d ordered. Fox 26 reports that after receiving a DoorDash notification, Matlock checked his Ring camera — and saw that his driver was standing at his front door buck naked. Shocked that his dinner had come from a man completely in the buff, Matlock threw the food away and promptly alerted DoorDash. Needless to say, the delivery driver has now found himself without proper clothing or a job: a DoorDash spokesperson says the driver was permanently removed from the platform, calling his behavior “abhorrent.”

A Uinta County judge issued a stark warning Friday when he sentenced three men for abusing an infirm moose in the second high-profile animal cruelty case in western Wyoming courts this year. “Wildlife of Wyoming belongs to the people of Wyoming,” 3rd District Court Judge James Kaste said during a court hearing Friday in Evanston. “You do this kind of nonsense in Wyoming, where we value our wildlife, you’re going to jail.”

Early voting in Wyoming’s Nov. 3 general election opened Tuesday. Early voting works differently than on Election Day. On Nov. 3, voters go to their assigned precinct polling place. Until then, each county runs a single early voting site out of the clerk’s office. Photo ID is required to vote early. Voters without one can get a free ID for voting from the Wyoming Department of Transportation’s Driver’s Services at 307-777-4800.

A 33-year-old Cheyenne man, Brayden Sosa, is facing up to 35 years in prison after reaching a plea agreement with prosecutors in a Sexual Assault of a Minor case. According to the post, the case began in November of 2025 when the Sheriff’s Office got a report of an alleged sexual assault of a minor. The Facebook post goes on to say that, “Under a plea agreement reached with the District Attorney’s Office, Sosa pleaded guilty to 1st Degree Sex Abuse of a Minor and Kidnapping. On September 21, 2026, Sosa was sentenced to serve no less than 30 years and no more than 35 years in prison”.
